Our production facility in Merzig:

Dear shooter,

No sooner was the Covid-19 crisis under control and sports operations on their way to normality than Russia's attack on Ukraine and the associated consequences present us all with new challenges. Embargoes, shortages of raw materials and the explosion of energy costs have forced us to increase prices. We hope that energy prices will stabilise in the coming months and that further price increases will not be necessary.

KRÜGER meets our customers' desire for individuality and flexibility in training with the new offer MY-OWN-TARGET.com. Here, for the first time, you have the opportunity to have your own ideas for shooting targets printed on the original shooting target cardboard or special white cardboard, even in very small quantities. We support you with a target configurator and many motif templates from our production design.

Over the past 50 years, our high-quality and inexpensive paper targets became more and more popular among athletes, clubs and associations. Today we can say that we are the leading manufacturer of shooting targets in ISSF quality worldwide; Kruger targets are known in more than 150 countries.

Our targets have a very good reputation among sport shooters due to their excellent price-quality relationship. We guarantee a consistent high quality standard for our targets, with the best shot impact characteristics, which meets all of the requirements of sport shooting.

We use special printing inks to achieve a deep black, non-reflecting aiming mark which is sharp-edged and accurate in all dimensions. The outstanding quality of the machine-smooth special board made from shortfibre raw materials, ensures that the shot holes do not have ragged edges.

In 2023, we received renewed admission as "Official Supplier" for the International Shooting Sport Federation (ISSF), which certifies the high quality of our targets. We are official supplier for paper targets of the ISSF since 2001, without any break. Since 2006, we have been approved and certified by another World Sport Federation. The World Archery Federation (WA) – former F.I.T.A. – accepted us as "Official Licensed Manufacturer" of target faces for the sport of archery. Therefore Krüger is the only producer worldwide who meets the requirements of both World Federations for Olympic sports. Additionally we become licensed manufacturer of the International Crossbow Shooting Union (IAU), the world association for the muzzle loader shooters (M.L.A. I.C.) and the World association 1500. So 5 shooting sport world federation relies on our quality „Made in Germany“.

Following the relocation of the printing plant for shooting targets to Merzig into the newly built, spacious production and storage halls, high investments were made for the future. Among other things, the „world record machine“ for sheet-fed offset printing has been running there for three years, with a capacity of over 20,000 printed sheets per hour, automatic printing plate changing and quality control during printing.

These investments contribute to price stability, quality leadership and the preservation of the high level of customer satisfaction, that has made Krüger Druck the leading company for sport shooting targets.

We wish you always "Good Luck" when shooting on Krüger targets!

TIPS FOR THE USE OF TRAINING TARGETS (AIR RIFLE)

Order-No. 1410

Dry training = Holding exercises: Used for checking and improving the outer and inner position (body control). The target on which a vertical stripe appears, can also be rotated 90° so that the stripe is horizontal. When holding on the target, the eyes should be closed for a second or two and then re-opened to check whether the stripe remains cleanly centred in the front sight. These exercises also serve to improve the shooter's physical condition.

Live training = Shooting at the training target: The fall of shot must stay in the area of the black stripe. If this is not achieved, and shots wander out of the black zone, self-analysis is required to establish whether the problem lies, for example, in faulty trigger control resulting in unwanted vertical or horizontal muzzle movements within the shot release sequence; or whether muscle tensions that the shooter was not aware of have been released at the moment of fire (control of the inner position). The width of the stripe is roughly equivalent to the 9 ring.

Order-No. 1420 and 1430

These go beyond target type Nr. 1410 in that now, both sideways and vertical movement must be suppressed simultaneously. For less able shooters, it is recommended to begin with Nr. 1430.

Order-No. 1440

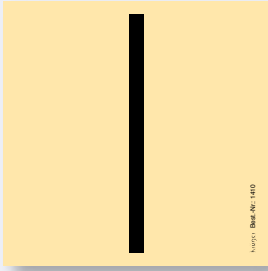

The purpose of this target is to help shooters learn not to take notice of and add up their score while they are shooting. By doing this they learn to avoid self-induced losses of concentration. As electronic scoring systems become ever more prevalent, it is nowadays highly recommended to train exclusively with this type of target. Anyway, the scoring machine will afterwards determine the score with more certainty than the shooter can.

Order-No. 1445

Through the use of this fully black air rifle target, the shooter learns to concentrate exclusively on the sight-picture.

Set of skills training targets for air pistol

1 set = 5 x 50 targets,
No. 3030, 3032, 3034,
3036, 3038

3039 10 - 17 x 17 1 set set 21.76 25.90

TIPS FOR THE USE OF TRAINING TARGETS (AIR PISTOL)

Order-No. 3030

Dry training = Holding exercises: The sights are held in the black strip. In this case, the shooter should concentrate on focussing the sighting eye sharply on the sights only, and not on the target.

Live training = Shooting at the training target: If the shots impact to the left or the right, it will be necessary to check how the grip is sitting in the hand. The objective is that the line of sight and the arm should form a single line together. The alignment of the basic shooting position is also dependent on this objective. The width of the stripe is roughly equivalent to the 9 ring.

Order-No. 3032

The purpose of this target is to help shooters learn not to take notice of and add up their score while they are shooting. By doing this they learn to avoid self-induced losses of concentration.

Order-No. 3034

Dry training = On this target, the bar is positioned so as to cover the area in which (on a normal target) the shooter would have the eye focused on the sights whilst evenly increasing pressure on the trigger, so that ideally the shot breaks automatically once the sights leave the stripe, that is to say, once the holding area has been reached. The bottom surface of the stripe is equivalent to the bottom of the aiming mark on a normal target. The goal is to release the shot exactly on leaving the bar, without halting the arm in order to squeeze the trigger.

Live training = In this case the shot group should be 12 to 48 mm above the lower edge of the stripe and should lie horizontally at least within the width of the black, in order to always be equivalent to the 9-ring.

Order-No. 3036

Dry training = The width of the horizontal band is roughly the same as the holding area on a normal target. The training objective is that when the shooter assumes the basic position, the sights should be automatically holding within the band, that is to say in the holding area. With this exercise, the retraction of the eye's focus from the target to the sights is trained at the same time.

Live training = Because the eye is concentrating on the sights, it is very easy to work out whether faults have crept into the trigger technique when using this target. The training goal is to shoot the smallest possible shot group.

Order-No. 3038

Dry training = The triangle is based on the air pistol target. The bottom edge has about the width of the aiming mark (59.5 mm) and the distance from the base to the tip of the triangle is also 59.5 mm. The shooter can orientate the sights very easily on the bottom edge; canting or over-tightness can easily be identified.

Live training = The shots should be as close to the centre of the triangle as possible, within the area of the 9-ring. Because of the special geometrical form, the shooter can very easily work out whether the sights were steady in the holding area when the shot was released. This element of training is also used by experienced shooters during the competition season, to eliminate the errors that creep in over a period of frequent competitions.

Order-No. 3040

Through the use of this fully black air pistol target, the shooter learns to concentrate exclusively on the sight-picture.

TIPS FOR THE USE OF TRAINING TARGETS (PISTOL)

Order-No. 3150

Dry training = On this target, the bar is positioned so as to cover the area in which (on a normal target) the shooter would have the eye focused on the sights whilst evenly increasing pressure on the trigger, so that ideally the shot breaks automatically once the sights leave the stripe, that is to say, once the holding area has been reached. The bottom surface of the stripe is equivalent to the bottom of the aiming mark on a normal target. The goal is to release the shot exactly on leaving the bar, without halting the arm in order to squeeze the trigger.

Live training = In this case the shot group should be 12 to 48 mm above the lower edge of the stripe and should lie horizontally at least within the width of the black, in order to always be equivalent to the 9-ring.

Order-No. 3155

Dry training = The triangle is based on the air pistol target. The bottom edge has about the width of the aiming mark (59.5 mm) and the distance from the base to the tip of the triangle is also 59.5 mm. The shooter can orientate the sights very easily on the bottom edge; canting or over-tightness can easily be identified.

Live training = The shots should be as close to the centre of the triangle as possible, within the area of the 9-ring. Because of the special geometrical form, the shooter can very easily work out whether the sights were steady in the holding area when the shot was released. This element of training is also used by experienced shooters during the competition season, to eliminate the errors that creep in over a period of frequent competitions.
